After lunch, served in the recreation room of the Nurse's residence, a film, "The One Who Heals", was shown in the auditorium. Released by the American Medical Association through its Department of Medicine and Religion, the presentation depicted four initiations of common concern to the healing team.

Each showed that faith is a factor in dealing with both the patient and his family. The dialogue clearly indicated the necessity of the two professions working together to treat the whole man, and the value of their cooperation to all concerned.

Red Cross On Disaster Job

Somewhere at this moment Red Cross volunteers are providing shelter, food, clothing, and medical care for families whose lives have been disrupted by tragedy of one kind or another—fires, floods, tornadoes, and other misfortunes.

It could be in Virginia.

According to figures released today by Mr. Mark V. O'Neill, Red Cross Fund Chairman for Virginia, disasters of one type or another affected families in virtually every corner of the state. In effect, disasters happened to many Virginia families who felt that, "it could never happen to us."

Mr. O'Neill, of 8205 Rambler Drive, Richmond, stated that a total of 42 families were granted Red Cross assistance following major disasters. In addition, Virginia chapters also assisted 347 families in 422 minor disaster-type emergencies in which less than five families were affected.

O'Neill noted that Red Cross disaster assistance in Virginia totaled 32,349.

"The most common family disaster in Virginia last year was fire," said O'Neill, "reflecting the same findings tabulated throughout the United States."

Actually, I had intended to write today's Column on the fabulous George Armstrong Custer. Custer was very much here at Appomattox. From childhood, Custer somehow contrived to be present at "the big moment" and get the hero headlines. He lived and died on "the big exciltment" and although he is remembered now for the Massacre at Little Big Horn in the Indian Wars against Chief Sitting Bull, I must say that in the War Between The States he was an equal with Stuart or our modern George S. Patton. And so maybe next week I will be writing about a Southerner's look-see at Custer. I'll sign off now, but I will start writing right now in the face of the challenge to present the life of Custer in a single column.

Farm Bureau News

Submitted by Clarence F. Moore, President, Appomattox County Farm Bureau

Here's a row one. A dumpmobile, of all things!

An ingenious British engineer has come up with an automobile-as-a-row-on-chicken manure. He has found a way to heat the manure and get methane gas (which is usually found in mines). They say he heats the chicken droppings to get the gas and then runs it through the engine.

The gas - producing plant costs $150 to produce and lets off no objectionable odor. The engine runs fine.

Bureaucracy is really something. In England, again, a poultry farmer built a $4,200 poultry house but he forgot to get permission from the Planning Board. He will have to tear it down.

The nice thing about it all is that he's been promised that if he tears it down he'll be given permission to build another one. Yes, you guessed it, in exactly the same spot — and exactly like the original!

Farmers all over the country will be feeling more and more the effects of the closing out of the Bracero program. The Bracero farm laborers with their knack for specific jobs; program has made it possible for producers in the Southwest and far West to get dependable laborers, especially at harvest time. The United States Employment Service says it can provide the laborers California farmers need, but farmers have had some of their crop to rot in the fields because the workers provided by USES would not do satisfactory work. Domestic farm workers from the east coast are moving westward to take advantage of the higher wages they can earn in California and other Western states. Eastern vegetable and fruit producers are becoming concerned over their inability to recruit a satisfactory labor supply.

Some folks are constantly afraid that "Corporation Farms" will take over the production of agricultural products. In 1960, according to STATISTICAL ABSTRACT, 17, 139 income tax returns filed by corporations were classified as "agriculture, forestry and fisheries." These so-called corporation farms represent .0042 percent of all farms. And many of them are not farms at all. They are in other kinds of business. There's the further fact that many family - type farmers are organized as corporations for business purposes. The name corporation has nothing to do with the size of the operation or the number of employees on a farm.

The 1964 production season was much more favorable than the 1963 season. The drought of 1963 cut agricultural production of field crops to a total value of just over $230 million in Virginia. The crop Reporting Service sas the 1964 production was up a bit more than $60 million to more than $290 million. Did on get your share of the 23 percent increase?

A circle with a ten - mile radius contains about 200,000 acres. What would happen if all the productive acres in such an area around your farm would increase its productivity by only $10 more per acre? The farmers in that area would have a gross increase in income of from $600 thousand to a million dollars. Why not start a program to do just that. Think what it would do for the economy of your neighborhood

Steele Addresses S. S. Cooperative

Proposed redistricting and reapportionment will have a terrific effect on agricultural people, W. T. Steele, Jr., general manager of the five-state Southern States Cooperative, told members and guests at the annual regional banquet luncheon meeting Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Steele, a native of Spout Spring now of Richmond, said: "the representation will be taken away from the rural people under the proposed plans.

Farmers will have little or no voice in government. Certainly there should be a constitutional amendment to give the citizens a vote on how the counties and states should be apportioned," he said.

Named Officer

Carlton Phillips, Sr. has just been made secretary and treasurer of the Bailey Spencer Hardware Company, Lynchburg.

A volunteer in the Air Force, Phillips served a term in the Air Forces in World War II returning to serve again during the Korean conflict.

He has served Bailey Spencer since 1946, with the exception of his service time.

He is married to the former Margaret Babcock, and the Phillips have two sons, Carlton, Jr., and Charles. They live in Appomattox.

Correction To Pipe Story

Mrs. Bess Maddox, of Pamplin furnished us some more information about the hand made clay pipes the other day. The pipes sent to Laramie, Wyoming as related in a TIMES-VIRGINIAN story of March 4 were NOT made in the Pamplin Pipe Factory, but are in fact much older, says Mrs. Maddox. They were made by hand in hand presses by housewives, using individual presses, with the result that each pipe design is individual. The pipes are more than 100 years old. They furnished "pin money" and grocery money for housewives of Pamplin City long, long ago, and are a real keepsake of the past, says Mrs. Maddox.
